You don't switch away from your PC to your smartphone to reply to an email or an instant message, so why should a simple SMS message be any different? Thankfully, if you have an Android device, you can continue using your PC (and its full-size spacious keyboard) to read and send text messages. Our choice for this task: MightyText. MightyText Platform: Android, Web, Chrome Price: Free ($4.99/month Pro) Download Page Features Syncs SMS and MMS on Android phone and Web Stores messages up to 6 months for free (forever for Pro users) Syncs contacts from phone Syncs photos and videos from your phone's gallery, with editing and filters Add media from preloaded gallery of popular GIFs, videos, memes, emojis and quotes Favorite texts Default list view, grid-based power view for multiple conversations Battery indicator Notifications for incoming calls Dial a number from the web (needs phone to talk) Ring your phone to find it Chrome extension to send messages from Gmail and Facebook chat windows Schedule text messages to send later (pro only) Save message templates (pro only) Create contact lists for easy group messages (pro only) Send messages to 25 people at a time (pro only) Add signatures (pro only) Block certain numbers from syncing with MightyText (pro only) 11 additional themes (pro only) Where It Excels Of all the different PC text messaging solutions for Android, MightyText is the easiest to use. Install it on your Android, sign into Gmail, fire up the webapp and you are ready to go. The app hooks you with the "it just works" charm and then unloads some handy extra features to keep you happy. The big seller is how effortlessly it syncs your text messages, whether you are connected on Wi-Fi or using a data plan. The Power View makes it easy to carry out multiple text conversations simultaneously. Plus, if you use the Chrome extension, it will give you pop-ups when you are in your Gmail or Facebook tabs, much like how an incoming chat message looks in those windows. And you can compose new messages too. The Pro version ($39.99/year or $4.99/month) takes it up a notch with the ability to schedule messages and save templates—both useful features that are worth the money if you text a lot. Where It Falls Short Search. That's the biggie missing in MightyText and there doesn't seem to be a good explanation why you can't search through all your text messages, even though they are right there. It's not even available in the Pro version. The preloaded gallery of GIFs, videos and more is limited, doesn't have great material, and there doesn't seem to be a way to add your own to it, but we're not too broken up about that. MightyText also has some issues with MMS on Android phones that aren't using the stock messaging app, so if you are using a text messaging replacement for Android, you may have to switch it off from "default" to solve the problem (at least, according to the MightyText FAQ). G/O Media may get a commission. Chill out! If retro-style candy-colors are kind of your thing, Indacloud's top selling gummies hit that nostalgic craving—they are vegan gummies packed with 500 mg Delta 8 cannabis. Use the promo code GIZMODO30 It's been a while since we last looked at Android text messaging replacements. Our previous... Read more The Competition If searching through your text messages is important to you, then AirDroid—which is a complete Android-to-PC control solution (not just texting)—is your best option. One of the main features of remote controlling your Android through the Web is robust text messaging support as it indexes all your messages and carries out quick searches. However, MMS support on AirDroid is weak in both sending and receiving files, especially if you are messaging to a non-Android phone. In our tests, MMS messages sent to an iPhone and a BlackBerry didn't go through at all, and the BlackBerry's MMS didn't come through either. Android: We mentioned AirDroid 2's public beta a few months ago, but the new version is finally... Read more A popular second option is DeskSMS, but there doesn't seem to be much reason to consider it, especially considering it requires an annual $5 subscription. Both MightyText and AirDroid are better options, but it does have one thing going for it: integration with Google Talk/Hangouts. Plus, it's got a nifty tablet app called TabletSMS that basically lets you handle text messages on an Android tablet. And, obviously, one of the best alternatives for text messaging from your PC is to use Google Voice. However, while Google Voice can do a lot of other things—like forward calls, integrate with Gmail for VOIP, and other stuff like that—its texting features are pretty mundane. Google Voice doesn't support MMS (except on Sprint), its texting has a lot of weird bugs (like splitting up messages and showing them out of order), and overall just isn't that special. If you want to use MightyText but still get the other features of Google voice, there are other ways to get those features. Google hasn't updated Voice in ages. Once heralded as the amazing service that would unify our... How to Schedule Text Messages: iPhone, Android & Desktop Yes, you can schedule text messages. But iMessage on your iPhone doesn't have a built-in native way to send delayed texts and Google Messages isn't available to everyone. So I'm here to show you all the workarounds and ways you can schedule a text on iPhone, Android, and even desktop computers. Read on for more. You can schedule a text message on your iPhone (this article shows you how). But this automation is limited. There are other ways iPhone users can schedule texts. But business text messaging services give you the most features and flexibility to schedule texts. How to Schedule a Text Message on iPhone, Android, and your Desktop Computer Using MessageDesk Business-grade text messaging services like MessageDesk are great for things like SMS marketing. They allow you to: Here's how to send a scheduled text using MessageDesk: 1. Sign up for a free MessageDesk account Visit MessageDesk to create an account from any device. Once you have an account, download MessageDesk for iOS or MessageDesk for Android. MessageDesk makes it easy to import a .csv file with a list of contacts. You can also log in to the iOS and Android mobile apps and sync your contacts. There's also a way to export contacts from iPhone, iOS, or Android Devices. Once you've got your contacts in MessageDesk, search and select the contact(s) or group(s) you'd like to schedule a text message to. In the message compose box you'll see a calendar icon. Select your date and time in the message preview to schedule your text message. When ready hit Confirm Schedule. You can also set up recurring scheduled text messages and add other automated text message workflows using MessageDesk. How to Schedule a Text on iPhone The Shortcuts app is a simple way to schedule a text message on your iPhone. It allows you to automate and schedule text messages to individual contacts or groups. This is an easy and free solution, but it lacks features compared to business text messaging services. Here's how to schedule a text on iPhone using the Shortcuts app: 1. Open the Shortcuts app on your iPhone The Shortcuts app comes with iPhones running iOS 13 or later. You'll need to download the Shortcuts app from the Apple App Store if you're running an earlier iOS version. 2. Select Automation and Create Personal Automation Tap Create Personal Automations. If you have previously created automations, you won't see this option. Instead, tap the + icon in the upper right corner and then tap Create Personal Automation. Set the time for when you'd like the text message to send. Tap Month and scroll down to adjust the date you want the message sent on. When you're finished, tap Next. Scheduling messages in iMessage this way will set up an automatically recurring message to go out on the same date at the same time each month. If you plan for this to be a one-time event, you'll need to go in and delete the automation (or turn it off) once your scheduled text message gets sent. On the Actions menu, add a contact or a group of contacts from the Send Message section and then tap Next. Type your message in the message field and then tap Next. Note: message composition features are limited. Messages send as simple text messages, vs. iMessages. You can't add images (MMS), gifs, emojis, etc. Review your new Automation to be sure it contains the correct details. Check the default option to Ask Before Running. You can tap the toggle next to Ask Before Running to turn this off if you want the automation to run automatically. If everything looks good, tap Done, and the automation will run. This method sets up an automation that will send the same text message to the same person or group on the same day and time every month. If this isn't what you want, then remember to go back and delete the automation once it runs. To delete the automation, slide your finger from right to left on the automation and tap Delete. How to Schedule a Text Message By Setting a Reminder on Your iPhone Another way to schedule a text on your iPhone is by setting a reminder for yourself at a scheduled time to send a text message. This doesn't technically count as a scheduled text message since it's not fully automated, but it's a workaround. Here's how you can compose your message in advance and save some time: 1. Open the Reminders app Tap + New Reminder and give your reminder message a title. 2. Type and compose your text message as a reminder You can also add details to your reminder message or add them to a list. 3. Tap the calendar icon to schedule your reminder Tap Done when you're finished. When you get the reminder, copy and paste the message into the Messages app on your iPhone. You can use your Android to schedule text messages, but only on phones with Android 7 and newer using Google Messages or Samsung Messages. Not everyone has access to Google messages and scheduling automation in both cases is limited. Again, business text messaging services give you more features and flexibility to schedule texts. How to Schedule a Text Message on Android 7 and Newer Using Google Messages Create a text message, but don't send it yet. Note: If your phone isn't connected to Wi-Fi or data at the scheduled time, your message will be sent when your device reconnects. 2. Touch and hold Send Hold the Send button. After a moment, the Schedule send overlay will appear. Tap Pick date and time or you can choose from among several preset times. If you choose your own date and time, a calendar opens. After you pick a date, a clock opens so you can pick a time. Tap Next. 4. Tap Send You should now see a clock icon to indicate that this is a scheduled text. If you open a conversation with a scheduled message, there will be a "Scheduled message" notification. How to schedule text messages on Android using Samsung Messages You can schedule texts using Samsung Messages if you have a Samsung android phone. 1. Start the Samsung Messages app Create a text message, but don't send it. 2. Tap the arrow to the left of the text field See additional options, then tap the + plus button. 3. Tap "Schedule message" from the library of options that pop up. Set the time and date that you want to send the message, then tap Done. 4. Tap the Send button to send the message at the scheduled time By this point, you may already know if you're ready for a business SMS platform. But if you aren't already sending texts as a business, then you're missing out. 39% of businesses already use third-party apps to automatically send SMS text messages and connect with their customers. And 76% of customers already receive SMS messages from businesses. You've got many business text messaging services to choose from. But I'd be remiss if I didn't suggest MessageDesk as an SMS scheduler. With MessageDesk you can schedule both 1-on-1 and 1-to-many text messages using Broadcasts. You can even set your message to recur at regular intervals. Try MessageDesk for free.
